Organic Probiotic Soil Discovery Could Change Wine Industry

Miryal, an organic, probiotic soil discovery, hopes to transform the grape and wine industry. It consists of rich, live probiotics called mycorrhizae, which help up to 95% of all plant species adopt strategies to exist in the stressful environments that surround them. Plant root systems treated with Miryal work synergistically below ground, reducing or eliminating the need for synthetic fertilizers and pesticides, nourishing vineyards for maximum crop yield and increasing resilience to disease and harsh climatic conditions such as drought and water conservation practices. It's 100% organic and contains no synthetics. www.miryal.com

Fill-Air Flow System Replaces Packing Peanuts

Fill-Air Flow System, an inflatable packaging system, provides a space-saving, cost-saving and breakage-resistant alternative to polystyrene peanuts as void-fill and cushioning in packing boxes. Its low price point makes protective air pillows affordable for retail shipping service centers for the first time. In addition, a single roll of ready-to-inflate plastic bags frees up nearly 50 cubic feet of storage space (compared to packing peanuts) and costs less than the equivalent peanut fill volume. www.parcelpkg.com
